

Arlington Businesses:

The Arlington Economic Recovery Taskforce, a volunteer group formed to work on issues facing businesses during COVID-19 identified one major issue- securing supplies needed for the changed work environment.

COVID-19 has altered the reality of workplace safety and businesses face the challenge of providing safety measures for workers and customers. The personal protective equipment (PPE), cleaning and sanitizing supplies are in high demand and not always readily available.

Mike Simpson, owner of Grocery Outlet in Arlington and member of the taskforce, volunteered to put together a purchasing guide using his expertise and resources in the industry. Mike compiled lists of PPE and social distancing signage and negotiated discounts on behalf of Arlington businesses. This guide is now available to all businesses.

Mike Simpson stated, "As a local business owner, I know the value in having a dedicated supply chain and access to resources for PPE during this time. We wanted to give Arlington businesses the opportunity and resources to help them get open quickly and safely for their customers and staff. It's been a pleasure working with the City of Arlington and other local business leaders to develop strategies to get us moving forward."

Mayor Barb Tolbert added, "I am so appreciative of the efforts of local business leaders to help support our business economy in getting prepared for the grateful day when all business doors are again open. Mike Simpson has always shown a heart for the community of Arlington."

The supplier guide is established by the volunteer task force and not verified or endorsed by the City of Arlington.

We hope that you will find this useful.
