Hi Amy,

I have learned about proposed hot dip galvanized processing plant near the Glen Eagle residential area of Arlington, Washington. I have been a resident of Snohomish County for many decades. And lived for over a decade in Arlington.

I am now located in Mill Creek, but am still a resident of Snohomish county and I have many friends and family in the area that would be impacted by this proposed plant.

This location is completely unsuitable for this type of plant that would expose residents to toxic chemical fumes. These fumes would have serious, long-term health impacts which include various health issues and increased risk of cancer.

I strongly urge you to oppose this proposed plant and find a more suitable location that is not near a residential community.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
Tami Rystrom
